1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a reciprocating compressor capable of effectively discharging compressed gas and a method of driving the same. 2. Description of the Background Art Compressors used for refrigerators and air conditioners compress refrigerant gas. The refrigerant gas compressed in such compressors is then introduced into a condenser through a pipe and a liquefied refrigerant gas is obtained by passing the refrigerant gas through an evaporator. The compressor used for the refrigerator or air conditioner is driven by a motor. The compressor is of a compression type using a crankshaft, and further it is often provided with a compression mechanism having at least one eccentrically rotatable cam, a compression chamber, a drive plate, a bearing, etc. FIG. 1 is a perspective view of a conventional reciprocating compressor. In FIG. 1, reference numeral 1 denotes a housing which contains a motor and a drive shaft (hereinafter referred to as a crank shaft) 3 supported by the housing 1 with a bearing 2 interposed therebetween. A bush 5 is inserted into the crank shaft 3 to support the crank shaft 3. A front housing 7 is connected to the crank shaft 3 with screws 6, while a rear housing 8 is connected to the front housing 7 by a shaft 9. The crank shaft 3 is provided with a cam 10 at an eccentric portion. The cam 10 is separated by a sliding boss 11 from the sliding boss 13 on the crank shaft 3. The cam 10, in turn, is connected to the drive plate 4 which has formed on its outer surface and on the peripheral portion thereof a gas path 12 for reciprocating movement of a piston 14. The drive plate 4 is provided with a casing hole 15 which, when the drive plate 4 is pressed radially outwardly, causes a gas inlet valve 16 to open. The drive plate 4 is further provided with a plurality of grooves 17 for accommodating oil therein. The piston 14 is provided with a slit 18 at its cylinder side peripheral portion, with a piston return spring 19 placed between the piston 14 and the rear housing 8 for returning the piston 14 to its initial position. The rear housing 8 is provided with a suction port 20 and a discharge port 21, both opening to the grooves 17 of the drive plate 4. The oil grooves 17 communicate with the casing hole 15 of the drive plate 4 through the suction port 20 and the discharge port 21.
