Once you start using Windows 8, the fact is that you will see some annoying software elements that have been developed to increase user experience. Sometimes we don't know that these options aren't the most convenient options. In this article, I will review the following: • Actions on the Windows Start Screen: Windows 8 has the option for actions on the Windows Start screen as an improvement to the Start screen so that you have an overview of the desktop options. For example, you may see the option "Open Document" when you click on a file on the desktop, instead of having to type a long file location into the Start screen. • Cortana: The Windows 8 Cortana is an intelligent assistant who will help you get things done. It comes integrated with the Start screen and will do things such as set reminders, access app information, and provide useful information, like movie times in theaters and automatically log you into websites. • Power button: Windows 8 has added to the standard Start menu an option for the Power button. When you click on the button, you will be able to shut down the computer or sleep it. • Screen Rotation: Windows 8 can be used in the landscape position or it can be rotated to the portrait position. Once again, it is an improvement in user experience. • Photos app: The Photos app was removed from the Windows 8 Start screen and replaced by the "Pictures" folder in the File Explorer. • Photos & videos: "Pictures" and "Videos" are folders in the File Explorer. If you click on the "Videos" folder, you can see the files of the videos you have on your computer. If you click on "Pictures", you will see the folders of the pictures you have on your computer and when you open the folder, you will see the pictures in their folders in the order in
