Countries around the world are coming together to raise awareness about nutrition and the role it plays in health and wellbeing. A majority of the world's population are not meeting their daily nutritional requirements, therefore, it is of utmost importance to help educate people to ensure that they receive all the nutrients that they need. The multi-national campaign, called World Nutrition Day 2018, took place in London on September 19, with the aim of providing support to those in need. In partnership with Wellcome, a global healthcare charity, the campaign was sponsored by the W3 Academy, a London-based nutrition-focused consultancy. The initiative was launched by Prince Richard, Duke of Cambridge and Countess of Wessex at a presentation that was hosted at the British Museum. This was followed by a series of discussions held with representatives from the W3 Academy, the British Nutrition Foundation, and the Institute of Epidemiology. The World Nutrition Day website includes a call to action to raise the issue of malnutrition, and it also provides tips and tools to help individuals and communities improve their nutritional status. A major issue is that over a billion people go to bed hungry every night. Malnutrition is a leading cause of death, and it is estimated that 835,000 under-fives die every year from deficiencies such as those in iodine and vitamin A. More than half of all people in the world are not meeting their daily
