A 15-year-old boy is in police custody after he allegedly opened fire with a handgun on a freshman at an Ohio high school, where students were ordered to remain inside the building for several hours. The gun-wielding teen who fired into a high school in southwest Ohio early Wednesday, injuring three people, has not been identified, and was shot in the stomach while trying to escape. No one else was injured. All three victims are listed in stable condition. The shooting took place at the Springfield R-1 School in Springfield, about 75 miles southwest of Columbus, early Wednesday, according to The Associated Press. The school had been locked down for about four hours, according to local media reports, while police searched the building. Students were told to stay inside their classrooms. The victims were students at the school, according to reports. Classes at the school were not held Wednesday, according to Springfield Public Schools. The school had been on lockdown since the shooting, the district's director of communications, Laura Ojala, told The Washington Post. In a statement, the district said that it is "praying for the victims and their families" and that it is continuing to investigate. Police have not released any further
