Allow you to transpose the pitches in a song. Very similar to the function of pitch-shifting software, except it does not actually change the pitch of the song. Instead, it uses standard MIDI notes with the pitch numbers transposed from one to another. You can apply this effect to any song you're playing on your computer. Simply assign MIDI notes (created by instruments and the like) to the slider. All the slider values have been tuned to a particular key, which is the scale you are working with. Use the Apply button to transpose your song to a different key. For example: You're playing a song in the key of C, you would use a key of D to play it. Slight pitch change is added to the transposition, since you're actually transposing from a different key. If the song you're playing is in a different key than the one you're transposing to, you may have to adjust the 'transpose' slider slightly.
