Q: Using Delphi Form's in multiple Projects I have noticed that the previous developer has saved all the forms (with some code) to a completely separate project. I've seen that the previous developer created the form using the VCL controls which is provided with Delphi. My question is, that if I want to use these forms I will be copying and pasting each form and module related code to the new project that I'm going to create. If I'm going to create a new project using the forms from the previous project, how can I avoid the issue of copying code which is just not needed? A: Yes, just copy the binary project and use it in other projects (if you're going to create a new project using the forms from the previous project, don't copy the code). You can also create a library project to combine binary and source code (it comes with Delphi).

Q: Wants to use this macro to change the listbox's color I have a listbox1 with two lists and I want to change the listbox's color depends on the property of those lists. This is my code: Private Sub

Document_PropertyChange(ByVal sender As Object, ByVal e As DocumentPropertiesChangedEventArgs) Listbox1.BackColor = If(listbox1.Items.Count = 0, DarkOrange, Color.Transparent) End Sub

The problem is when I execute this macro document gets changed too!! Any suggestions to not change the whole document?

A: You must pass the Control you want to change from the

Listbox1: Private Sub Document_PropertyChange(ByVal sender As Object, ByVal e As DocumentPropertiesChangedEventArgs)

'you only need the "Control" 'e.Control.BackColor =

If(e.Control.Items.Count = 0, DarkOrange, Color.Transparent)

ControlToChange.BackColor = If(ControlToChange.Items.Count = 0, DarkOrange, Color.Transparent) End Sub

Also, to avoid the change of the whole document, you need to break it in two parts:

Private Sub Document_PropertyChange(ByVal sender As Object, ByVal e As DocumentPropertiesChangedEventArgs
