Prospects for dietary cholesterol restriction from epidemiological evidence: does statin drug treatment save lives? The blood cholesterol (BC) level for the prevention of coronary heart disease (CHD) is defined by the statistically derived, threshold value of total cholesterol (TC) of >5.1 mmol/l. Most, but not all, studies provide evidence of a significant inverse relationship between dietary cholesterol (DC) intake and risk of CHD. In the USA and UK the estimated average population blood DC level is
