Download CS6 | Download CS4 | Download CS3 For the sake of simplicity, we will focus on computer screen shots in this tutorial. We will only be dealing with Photoshop actions and Presets in this tutorial. The principles of working with the several other features will be left for the reader to discover. Step-by-Step Photoshop Actions Tutorial | Photoshop Actions Tutorial | Photoshop Action [Instant Download, No Flashing!] You're welcome to download the demo Photoshop actions right away and use the preset in your screenshots for now. In the next post, we'll take a look at the basic features of Photoshop actions and how to make them. Step 1. Open Photoshop This is your Photoshop action (also known as a Photoshop preset). The file is saved in the actions folder. That's the important part to remember. Step 2. Import the image Drag and drop the file from the actions folder on your desktop into the window. * * Double-click the image you want to edit* * Double-click the image you want to edit Step 3. Open the action dialog box 1. Open the action

editor by pressing Ctrl-E or File —> Actions —> New

NOTE When a preset is not available, it's best to save your new action as a new file and rename it. That way, you don't have to worry about overwriting the existing preset. Step 4. Drag and drop the image on the preview screen 2. On the left side, drag and drop the image you want to edit on the interface. As soon as you drop the image, the corresponding settings appear on the right side. You can make the settings as you please, or you can use them as a guide to make a preset you want. Open: The dialogue box contains information about the image, like the image resolution. Important file types should be highlighted in the "Open Type" panel. Important resolutions should be highlighted in the "Open Size" panel. Adjust the TIFF Quality setting if the file size is too large to keep loading in Photoshop. * * This is a graphics editor for photographers, image editors and hobbyists. Mozilla Firefox HTML5 Application Certification Specification - thevibesman ===== micjam Is this a good start for Mozilla to make their own HTML5 app store? ~~~ gcp I don't know how much work they did on it but this looks very good (aside from Firefoxification). The important question for Mozilla is whether they can get enough traction. I don't know how much they can get for free, though, as most of the work is licensed under the GPL, so I can't know whether it's worth to me to donate. With IE 10 I _do_ see an effort at filling that gap, in that they're now likely to have a commercial plugin for XUL and that they've come out with a Flash-like plugin for HTML5. I don't know how that stack is architected internally, though. ----- amalcon I've been looking for a good list of HTML5 mobile development frameworks. My company is making an app for Windows Mobile, but unfortunately it isn't free, so we can't use most of the popular ones. HTML5 is great, but you need some really good, modern tools to use it well. ----- tmurray This looks like a much better document than the one available on the WHATWG site. The "compositor" concept for DOM is great -- I don't think this is getting enough attention. ----- stcredzero If you are a web developer, HTML5 should be one of your top priorities. Even if you think you aren't a "web developer", HTML5 is worth it for you since you're developing for the web with Node.js. I've seen many a discussion where "But who cares if Google doesn't like it?" Or "Do you really want to have to install another plugin?" People that are zealots about their proprietary tools, about as much reason and authority as the religious zealots who think sun-worshiping is the one true god. For more information on why HTML5 is such an important thing, go to
