This, of course, is a safeguard to prevent dishonest surveying. Indeed, prior to our recent survey, we hired a team to conduct a side-by-side comparison between two of the major manufacturers of ground-penetrating radar, Sonaca and Accuscan. The evaluation was done using a single emissivity model, the robust gamma-2 model, for comparative purposes. Both manufacturers, the conventional wisdom has it, use the same emissivity model and, as a consequence, their data should be consistent. They should have the same reported values of reflectivity and conductivity at the same depth and be in close agreement in their comparison calculations. The results of the test show a significant difference between the two manufacturers. While both use the same model for air-filled clay-filled sands, the permittivity constants for one are much higher than those for the other. The test clearly shows that the representation of ground-penetrating radar data from one manufacturer should not be used for comparison with data from another. This not only reflects a difference in the production process, but it also means that the quality of the equipment can vary from one manufacturer to the other. How this discrepancy in reported results from the industry came to be is something that should be closely examined. If it has been the case for as long as the testing team has observed, it would be reasonable to assume that the data being reported are not reliable and can be seriously misleading. Under no circumstances, therefore, should ground-penetrating radar data be used for any practical evaluation or construction-project work to determine the presence of petroleum or any other hydrocarbons. v. State, 426 So.2d 943, 944 (Miss. 1983), this Court stated "the question of whether the surreptitious entry by the police was reasonable or reasonable cause to believe that a crime was being committed is a question of fact for the trial judge to determine." In this case, the trial judge determined that Officer LaForte had a reasonable belief that a crime was being committed when he entered the appellant's home without a warrant or consent. Under the totality of circumstances, the trial judge's finding was not manifest error. The appellant's house was abandoned and unoccupied. The appellant's niece lived in one bedroom of the house, but the other bedrooms, which belonged to the appellant's son, and his daughter-in-law, were vacant. The house was located in an area in which a number of drug transactions had been observed. Officer LaForte testified that the appellant's house was the "most suspicious" building in the neighborhood. On top of the chimney there was a seven foot high sheet of plywood nailed over a gaping hole in the brick. Lifting this plywood revealed an area three feet square which contained a hole with exposed brick all the way around the exterior walls of the chimney. From this position, the hole was in plain view. The appellant's niece testified that she had observed *175 three men entering and leaving the appellant's house that day. She testified that at the time of the search she had seen the appellant's son, who lived in the house, and a man who came to her door. After she saw the men leave, she discovered that the appellant's house was empty and that her cousin's car was missing. The trial judge was in the best position to judge the credibility of the witnesses. We cannot say his finding that Officer LaForte had a reasonable belief that a crime was being committed was manifest error. III. We cannot find that the appellant's rights were violated by the state's failure to file the bill of information and the arrest warrant pursuant to Mississippi Code Annotated § 99-15-47. The appellant was arrested on February 11, 1989, by Officer Carlos Hernandez. At the time of the arrest, Officer Hernandez advised the appellant of his Miranda rights. The appellant waived his rights and agreed to give a statement to the police. The appellant consented to the search of the house. The trial judge conducted a pre-trial hearing pursuant to Mississippi Code Annotated § 99-15-47 on May
