The development team at Bigpoint are dedicated to providing an enjoyable experience for our players. Regarding the 'closed alpha' notification of new information, we are committed to providing information on the first-print promotion for the closed alpha. Thank you for your interest, and we will have a more thorough explanation of the content and our development progress in the future." The E3 event is just getting started, but already Bigpoint has apparently announced that the closed alpha for Elden Ring Product Key will be starting June 5th. This was confirmed through Twitter and Facebook posts by Maplestory's RyumaAbe. They also stated that an announcement will be made at this event. So, since Maplestory is now at E3 it is expected that the Elden Ring will be announced at the event, as well. This is also in line with the previous announcement that said that there was a world rework planned, and a new expansion coming out at the end of this year, so they are getting ready for the end of the year by announcing the closed alpha. FINAL FANTASY XIV will be released as of June 9th, and the Elden Ring and the closed alpha are announced to be released the same day. Update: According to the following tweet by @ffxiv_en(FFXIV Stream): @ moo_jitsu @ kupen @ Eoran 6/5 Hot Games & Madness Is Expected At E3! pic.twitter.com/8o8Yvh5s3S — FINAL FANTASY XIV (@FFXIV) June 4, 2016 The Japanese event is scheduled to begin June 5th, which is the same day as the English, North American, and European events. Now that the official Japanese opening for FINAL FANTASY XIV: A Realm Reborn has been announced, expect Square Enix to make further announcements regarding the highly anticipated MMORPG. The official opening for FINAL FANTASY XIV: A Realm Reborn will begin on June 5, with the game's first downloadable content, Heavensward, launching simultaneously, along with the closed beta test and a free patch update. The official announcements from Square Enix will be streamed in four languages, and the Japanese version will be subtitled into English. You can watch the stream live on YouTube through this link. It's a brand-new FINAL FANTASY, an all-new world, and an all-new FFXIV

(Eden Online) (GRiD) (RPG Review) GAME SUGGESTION IN “The Land Between”: “Inverted World System” -The Lands Between (SCHOOL OF PROFESSIONAL GAMING) “Dare to Emerge” Interview with Andrew Smith, Directed by Andy Bloch -Rise, Tarnished, and Become an Elden Lord (RPG-Audio) [SPOILERS] Q. Why did you decide to use the old school RPG genre as the basis for this game? Andrew: I wanted to push into something new and fun and something that was cutting edge, and then I got interested in the back-story of these games and I read articles and I was like, “Huh, this is really interesting, I want to do something similar,” but on the other side of the coin, I realized there was something really fun about that kind of an old school design. You know, a lot of the concepts aren’t new. You can have characters with stats, and you can give them powers, and there’s all sorts of mechanics, but what’s really fun is just that old-school flavor of it. One thing I’m really interested in is the world and the interactions between the characters and the world, and that's just in the top layers. And in this case, a lot of the gameplay is in the top layers as well. Q. Did you make any gameplay adjustments for this game? Andrew: Yeah, there were a lot of things we had to keep in mind when we created this game. As an RPG, we did have to make sure that the leveling system was a little more complicated. We gave you a lot of characters to choose from, we gave you a lot of different classes of characters. So that was something we had to think about. One of the things about an RPG is that when you play one, it's very dynamic, the character is a really powerful thing, and in this case we made sure that the character stats are dynamic as well. So as you explore the world and defeat different monsters, you'll be able to evolve your characters more and give them more and more abilities, in addition to the standard abilities they bff6bb2d33
