New responsive coach reactions Offers three new coach reactions from previous seasons: Managers can keep their foot on the gas when the pressure is on, or cool their jets. If the pressure is lost or the match going into extra time, a foot rest reaction allows players to change the momentum of the game. A second reaction lets managers react to a set piece situation: either accepting the new attack or pressing the defender to the post. Finally, a third reaction replaces a throw-in. To create the new throw-in reaction, goalkeepers can now dive, while managers can throw the ball out of play from a loose ball reaction. A sneak preview of some of the new “HyperMotion Technology” animations: Throw-ins: First reactions: Chocks: All reactions: New Stance Gauge Reactions can be selected by tapping the Manager Mode Stamina Meter, which is now located on the coaching interface. The Stamina Meter will also highlight a player’s reaction on the field. Time-outs can be taken during the match to pause the game and allows for these reactive animations to be played back at full speed. New “Press the Perfect Pass” When playing with a 3-vs-3 game, the new “Press the Perfect Pass” feature makes it easier for players to find open teammates by highlighting the perfect pass options on the field. The feature has been added to the Tools menu. New Training Mode New for FIFA 22, the new Training Mode in FIFA Ultimate Team allows players to add new training content from major commercial game releases to the FIFA Ultimate Team Player Profile. Players will also be able to assess their own game play, share player ratings and scour the community for new content by completing in-game challenges. New Content Items A complete and quality expansion of the in-game carousel, including: Vancouver Whitecaps FC – New to FIFA 22, the hometown team to David Ousted and the Vancouver Whitecaps FC are a new, digitally-rendered franchise in FIFA Ultimate Team. The “Whitecaps FC” cards are based on the Vancouver squad. EPL team Sunderland – This EPL squad is based on the squad of the current Sunderland Premier League team. This team includes the likes of former Sunderland youth players, including Tom Loft and Danny Barrow.
