“We’ve been working tirelessly to develop a deep and exciting football experience for our new generation of FIFA players,” said Oliver Bierhoff, Creative Director for FIFA and PES. “With HyperMotion Technology, we’ve introduced a whole new level of immersion for our players. FIFA 22 players will truly feel as if they’re playing in a completely new dimension.” This is the second year that the series has added the ability for players to control where they score on-the-ball goals by setting their shots in motion, which adds to the creative factor of goal-scoring. Each time you encounter the HyperMotion Auto-Shot, the ball will instantly lock in to a pre-chosen target that you set in motion during the creation of the attack, allowing players to go full-pace with their moves while setting their shots exactly where they want them. AI improvements also make a difference in FIFA 22, so defenders now react to the player, so they won’t be caught on their blindside. This also applies to more unpredictable situations, like a player running straight toward a defender who is caught unawares by a calculated run in. Your opponent will be forced to react, and will no longer face an easy and predictable goal-scoring opportunity. Improvements to the dribbling system and over-the-top offensive moves are also great additions to the series’s goal-scoring functionality. In addition to these changes, the camera system in FIFA 22 has been completely re-designed in an effort to better show the game’s fast-paced, high-velocity football. In particular, the viewing angle of the player has been completely re-configured to prevent the ball from going behind the player in either direction. This will help players understand how to move and identify what they need to do to improve their game. We are also adding an improved Player Profile page for those that want to create a career for their favorite player. Creating a profile is now a simple, intuitive process, where you can add a multi-angle image of your player and select from a number of editable data points, such as age, height, name, appearance and style. The editing and design of your player’s profile will be much more intuitive as a result. There are also new stadiums and training grounds available. The multiplayer mode of FIFA 22 is richer than

The story of CO2 is the story of the fight to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels, a fight that has been going on for more than a century. In their book, 'Blue Carbon', authors Fiona Jensen and Jan Nederveen Pieterse outline the key events that made the shift from fossil fuels to something greener possible. They said: "We are currently dealing with the consequences of over a hundred years of fossil fuel use. At the turn of the century, we were burning a fifth of the world's total fossil fuel reserves. That was unsustainable. "What made CO2 become a problem in the first place was the invention of the internal combustion engine. The shift to a renewable energy sources is again a consequence of the rise of oil and gas as dominant energy sources - at first it was coal, which was replaced by gas and oil." The first "killer app" of solar power was not bringing electricity to rural communities but to the world of aviation. When research into the ageing engines of vintage planes revealed that, with mass testing, they would last much longer, it led directly to the development of what is now the world's fastest-growing energy source - the solar cell. The book highlights the success of the renewable energy industry in the UK, but warns that in the absence of government incentives there is still much more to be done. The authors say: "We want to highlight a bright future, but only if
