In addition to being big and strong and mobile, they also must be light enough to avoid coming out at the second level on pass and run plays. That is why Denver Broncos starting left tackle Ty Sambrailo and right tackle Jared Veldheer are both considered "lightweights" by the coaching staff. "They're two of the smallest players on the roster right now," offensive line coach Steve Marshall said Tuesday. "So even though they have played their share of football, there is still a lot of room for improvement. So even though they've got a lot of football and they've been doing the job on a weekly basis, their strengths and weaknesses as players are still very much working on process. So they're going to get better and improve in that regard." Sambrailo has played the majority of the season in a veteran role because of his experience. But he has been inconsistent, struggling on some plays and showing glimpses of brilliance on others. Head coach Vic Fangio and general manager John Elway want Sambrailo to be a better, more consistent player and to that end, the first-team offensive line will no longer be "pushed around" as it has been throughout the season. Sambrailo is expected to have a much more consistent performance against the Chicago Bears on Sunday in the season finale. "If you will take a look at how we run the football up front, our offensive linemen have to be a lot lighter," Marshall said. "The rules of football don't allow you to be a heavyweight, strong offensive lineman. You have to be lightweight. You have to have mobility. You have to be nimble and agile. "So if you are going to be a tackle and you are going to block downfield, you have to be light and agile. You have to be a guy that can move and you have to have good foot quickness. Ty just needs to do a better job of that." Veldheer has struggled to stay healthy harpersAstrobiology Notebook Astrobiology Notebook is a weekly column about the developing area of astrobiology. It is written by astrophysicist James O'Mara. The column was introduced in January 2011. It is intended to provoke thought about the intersection of astrobiology and astrophysics, and what discoveries in astrobiology might mean for theories about life and the universe. Since publication, astrobiology Notebook has been followed by a blog hosted by the Open University.
