Joining the Soviet Union (- Before the vote on Amendment 3: Janusz Lewandowski Mr President, I would like to make just one point of order in relation to voting. When we began voting, we had Amendment 2 on the table, and Amendment 3 was added to the text of the motion for a resolution on the future of Europe. I consider that to be a serious procedural violation, because we were not given time to debate Amendment 3 as we were told we would be, and I have been told I cannot speak on it. I am prepared to accept that there was a mistake in the wording in Amendment 3, and I am prepared to accept that it should be withdrawn. But the fact remains that we were not given time to discuss it, and I consider that a breach of procedural etiquette. Bernd Posselt (DE) Mr President, you called the Members back here much earlier than we thought, and now my Group is voting on Amendment 3 while the time for discussion is still running. May I just take a minute to point out that this is not a question of political or party loyalty. I am merely pointing to the fact that Amendment 3 was not a part of the motion for a resolution put down by the Committee on Foreign Affairs. It was only added later, in a last-minute fashion, and I thought that was unacceptable in a European Parliament which insists on the rights of all members to be able to speak on all issues. President Mr Posselt, we shall not reopen the debate on the amendment; it is settled. The vote will now take place. I have to inform you that Amendment 3 is going to be withdrawn. If you missed the last two updates, check them out first. They include further details about our new column which we're looking forward to launching in the coming days. And they give a small preview of the next chapter: the Inside and Center. Stay tuned. Aww. The other day I wrote about our new editorial plan for this site: 'Light and Fun, Inside and Center.' The only thing is, I wasn't sure what we'd be like yet. I'm happy to say that the first part of our plan is now in place. We've launched a new section, Inside. It's a brand new section with a new concept: e79caf774b

Question. Prove that $f_n(x)=\left\{ \begin{array}{cc} 1 &,\; n=2x \\ 0 &,\; n \neq 2x \end{array} \right.$ is a uniformly convergent sequence on $\mathbb{R}$ iff f_n converges pointwise to f. I guess this sequence is uniformly convergent on R and every point P in $\mathbb{R}$ has a Cauchy subsequence converging to P. But how to find it? Thank you in advance! A: Let $f_n = f_n(x) = \frac{\chi_{[n,n+1)}(x)}{\frac{1}{n}+x}$. It is easy to check that each f_n is bounded, and all $\|f_n-f_m\|_{\infty} \leq \frac{1}{m+1}$ for

$m\leq n$. Let $\epsilon>0$ and $k\in\mathbb{N}$. Then there is a $n\in\mathbb{N}$
