"Titan Outpost" is the last game that Frank Nicolaas de Boer will produce for SSK using his own sound tracks. Starting in the year 1978 the composer developed special soundtracks for SF-based SSK titles (Neutron Patrol, The Quest for Delphi, Powerstick, Titan Outpost, etc.) These soundtracks were composed in the 80's, many had graphic scores of early SF movies, or were based on a certain genre (cosmic, dark, military, post-apocalyptic, futuristic, space opera, etc.). This soundtrack is based on the early 70's soundtracks from Mega Drive SSK-series (Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, The Odd Eaters, The Secrets of Raxla, The Return, The Zero Effect, etc.). However, due to a change in the game's company, the soundtracks will no longer be composed for any new SSK-titles. 'Titan Outpost' was a well-acclaimed Space-Action Survival game that asked the player to defend his settlement in a space-mining colony from an alien attackers. The short prequel to the full game which was unveiled at the end of March, promises to be one of the deepest and most immersive virtual reality stories ever created. It seems to take you through a VR detective story, following a scientist in her journey to research the mysteries of the sea. It's a pretty cool idea, and a short but sweet teaser trailer gives an excellent idea of what to expect. The game was developed by an international team of VR experts and IKO, the creators of VR games like Kodachrome and The Expanse VR. With a release date still to be confirmed, they've not been sharing any details, so it's anyone's guess as to when you might be able to jump in and check it out. I'm particularly excited for this, as being a Game Design master myself, I can see there being potential for really interesting things to happen in this setting. The opportunity to explore the world around you, examine the environment, look at other characters, discover their stories and make your own path through the game, is very tantalizing to say the least. However, I can't wait to get my hands on it, as that concept in a brief form, leaves me wanting to explore further, and I know how exciting the journey is to find out more. So, until we know more, it's time to have a look at what was revealed at the end of March, and what this game could be. ]]> The Current: Human

- The Road to Finale? March 28, 2015 After the successes of many non-State actors (ISIS, Boko Haram, Nusra Front, etc.) in seizing entire geographic territories, everyone is starting to ask, where is the end of State sovereignty in this world? Under the "post-political" world scenario, in which the State has totally lost its independence in laws and maps, nothing would prevent global groups to send militants to attack State entities, to take foreign hostages, or to seize foreign territories. Also, in this scenario, the State would be able to do absolutely nothing about such actions. Why? Because militaries all over the world are mostly deployed against armed groups, not against States. Which means that in contrast to the recent years, today a battlefield defeat of an insurgent group (ISIS, Boko Haram, Nusra Front, etc.) means almost certain victory for the State. And yet, that is exactly what we have witnessed for a long time: The Iraqi armed forces lost Iraq and Syria rebel groups. And the US won the Philippines at the hands of an international anti-terrorist coalition and of the Philippine armed forces. The Nigerian Civil War is a bigger mess than it was before. Yemen is being destroyed by Saudi Arabia and Iran. Even Pakistan has experienced better military achievements for the last twenty years than the State of Pakistan had for the last ninety. Therefore it is safe to say that we are living in an environment rich of opportunities for State destruction. But what does it mean for the current situation? Reuters News Agency (via Independent UK) outlines a scenario that is very likely to come true, as it fails to address the most important factor - the end of State sovereignty. The conflict, which is in its fifth year, has displaced about a quarter of Syria's population - perhaps as many as 12 million people - most of them migrating to Europe. The United Nations is expected to announce soon that it has "severe doubts" about Syria's ability to govern without outside help after recent deadly bombings in the capital, Damascus, and a suicide attack outside a ruling Baath Party meeting in the southern city of Deraa. And what makes Reuters think that there will be outside aid? It has quoted Bashar Ja'afari, the Syrian chargé d'affaires at the UN in New York: "I don't think we need any help from the outside. ... We will do our best to lead Syria to democracy, ♡"
