[The characteristics of the transport of electromagnetic waves through the atmosphere of Mount Jehol]. The characteristics of transport of electromagnetic waves in the atmosphere of the Mount Jehol region have been investigated using polarization technique and a solar simulator. It has been shown that the polarization of the entire white radiation (frequency range 200-1000 nm) incident on the earth's surface is preserved in the atmosphere of the Region of Kandal and Shandong, whence the dependence of the atmospheric parameters on the height of the sun have been found.An image sensor is a semiconductor device that can convert an optical image into an electrical signal. It consisted of thirteen cobble stones, marked by the year 1858, and thirteen tombstones. An attractive red-brick tower with a large pyramidal steeple, six stories high, was added in 1866. The total cost was $20,000. The steeple was struck by lightning in 1888, badly damaged, and later replaced. The interior of the church was repainted in 1903, and the interior of the tower was re-covered in 1941. The present steeple is in the process of being erected. The walls of the church contain interesting paintings of the early days of the Red River country by Mrs. Annie E. Bixby, of Duluth, which adds much to the interest of the building. In the bullet-hole-damaged walls, the following inscription is to be read: "1858--This Stone was erected by the people of the County and State of Wisconsin to perpetuate the memory of the patriot who was the first to emigrate hither in search of a home--General Henry A. Pike." -- ST. MARY
