DLL is really slow in the production process. The application is actually doing a lot more than the others, however its "transaction" time increases as well. The time needed for a full build is longer compared to that of DLL. It is an easy task to upgrade to the new version of Dynamics AX. Just download it from the weblink on the product page. It will increase the deployment time, but you will easily do it. I have built both the AX website and the AX application with Site Builder and then converted each to a package that is built with Page Setup. You can use maketool to split a single package into multiple packages, but you must use the command line. To split a single package into multiple packages, use PageDown. PageDown can be downloaded here. It is available as a ZIP file. Double-click on the package to start installing it. The installation should be completed in about 15 minutes. Once it has been installed, I opened the configuration tool and selected the location of the newly installed package. The configuration tool then asked me to choose what type of package we wanted to create. I selected the type of package that was required for my project. I then created the package. Before making the package, the configuration tool asked me to specify the name of the newly created package. I entered the name of the package. I then proceeded to specify where to store the package. I gave the package name a location. I selected the path from where I wanted to place the package. Once I
