After the battle against Captain Nova, Holly discovers that a piece of puzzle from the Plane had fallen into the water. Holly suggests that the group find some way to land on the plane and use the piece of puzzle to return to the land. This will obviously require the player to perform some new actions. However, there is no guarantee that the player will successfully use the piece of puzzle and land. There are many other ways to return to the land without using the piece of puzzle. So, the player should choose one of the actions to proceed to the new section of the game. If the player is careful enough, he will encounter the Blue Edge that had been placed on the board when he was landing on the plane. Holly suggests that the player move this edge to the north of the board and use it as a path to land. So, the player needs to move this Blue Edge until he finds a way to land. The Blue Edge moves only horizontally and does not turn to the right or left. The player can interact with the Blue Edge by pushing it into the holes in the board, which means that he should push the Blue Edge into the hole marked "P", or if that is not available, into the hole marked "X". If this action is successful, the player will land on the plane without using the piece of puzzle and return to the land. Note: In the previous sections of the game, the player used the "Hint" that was given to him when he was landing on the plane and he got this piece of puzzle. Try to avoid the remaining holes that have the number sign because they are toxic and the player will die. The best way to achieve this is to go to the tile marked with the number "0". In this case, the player will find the Blue Edge. Choose between the following actions: • ACTION A: Land on the plane using the piece of puzzle • ACTION B: Skip the exploration and reach the new section of the game (if you want to continue) • ACTION C: Push the edge back to the main section of the game and use the piece of puzzle again Note: When the player landed on the plane, a locker appeared with a gun and a supply of 100 ammunition. But, the player must bring those things back. Gameplay Give Up The Dupe: When Captain Nova leaves, Holly agrees with the player that he must use the piece of puzzle to return to the land. However,

"Dominus Galaxia" is a 4X space strategy game, set in the far future. The game focuses on trade and diplomacy while combat plays second fiddle. The alien attackers are using wormhole technology to expand their sphere of control across the galaxy. They enslave the masses, while your board of planets (what else?) is your only shield against them. Your job is to expand your holdings while discovering new trade routes, building outposts and constructing a thriving economy. Your main choices revolve around three main components, "the Technology Tree", "Colony Building" and "Diplomacy". "The Technology Tree" is the main map on which you'll be investing your resources, and it will see you adapt your production facilities and research focus to the ever-changing conditions. There is an infinite number of technology choices, and you can research multiple techs at once. Each technology allows you to build new research buildings, which in turn create new colonies or technologies. "Colony Building" is a submenu in the galaxy map. Here you will construct the core of your empire. You have the option of starting off with a small core and then rapidly building up your population over time, or you may want to start off with a larger, more powerful core. Finally "Diplomacy" is the submenu in the space map. Here you may form treaties with your neighboring planets, establish research treaties, increase your relationship with other races to gain bonuses and so on. A dynamic galactic environment is something that helps separate this game from most others, but even with that, we are confident that you'll enjoy the "War within the War", the challenge of using diplomacy and trade to build the best empire you can. Features: A fully functional battle-reconstruction system, with an in-depth understanding of how that system operates. Ability to pause at any time during a battle, and then continue where you left off. The option to auto-resolve a battle after a number of turns. This greatly simplifies the final decision-making. Ship design system, with an emphasis on practical ship-building and realism, which often leads to very novel designs that are still challenging to use. AI versions of everything. The AI can often out-think you with its highly flexible tech tree, and has set-up of its relationships and planets to make that so. Universe design is both highly flexible, and very deep. Conditions are
