One of the most popular services in the world - Netflix - has now finally launched on the iPhone and iPod touch. It is free for members of the service until early next year, when you'll be charged a monthly fee of $8.99. The app makes it easy to browse popular movies, TV programs and documentaries available on the online video streaming service. The app also offers a database of more than 15,000 titles, a handy help system and a search feature that locates an item on the service's site. The database includes movies, TV shows and documentaries, while clips can be viewed in both 1:1 and 3:2 aspect ratios. Netflix also offers the ability to subscribe and view lists of movies and TV shows available to download or stream for offline viewing. It has over 100,000 subscribers in the US, with 17.6 million paying customers worldwide. But as you'll see in the screenshots below, the app does not have a proper look and feel, being similar to the mobile version of a browser. Other obvious missing features include a map view, a way to manage your queue, a messaging system and a way to sort content.
