Iowa State University added another prominent receiver to its football program on Thursday when Joe Klecko joined the program and caught a touchdown pass on his first pass attempt. The former star of the Iowa Western Community College Mustangs was the first to see the orange turf of Jack Trice Stadium and took advantage of an opening in the defensive coverage for a 49-yard touchdown reception. Klecko had the lone catch of the game and threw a pair of touchdown passes in his collegiate career, both of which came in the offseason. The third-year transfer from Iowa Western Community College did not try a pass against Iowa State after the dismissal of Jake Rudock.

Wolfgang Larz described how he used FOCUS peer-support to manage PRD prognosis Investigator Wolfgang Larz described how he used FOCUS peer-support to manage his patients with PRD. During the team's first meeting, Larz spoke with FOCUS social workers who explained that they had a long list of patients, and that it would be hard for individual social workers to manage the increasing caseload. He suggested that the social workers share this list, and develop strategies to better support patients. “I like this idea,” he explained. After summarizing his novel approach, Larz had the opportunity to ask questions in response to speaker and audience feedback. It was clear that many in attendance had witnessed the value of the varied services offered by FOCUS. An audience member urged attendees to continue the meeting at the next available time. As he prepared to wrap up the meeting, Larz confirmed that the panel was now approved as an official FOCUS committee. “I like this idea,” Larz explained, of sharing FOCUS resources. “We need more collaboration between physical and occupational therapists.” To learn more about this month’s MPST day out, visit our Facebook page.
