Ausstellungskatalog An exhibition of the result of our collaborative work with founders and artists Elke Heidenreich, Björn Wagner and Oskar Engdahl since January 2012. Titled CASSEL nr. 1. We are here - and now begin the real work (in German). The 3 founders have committed to this project with its real concept. All the steps of production of 100 mattresses with a total weight of 5 tons. The production was organized on a sole site at the Sandbostel factory in the Ruhr area. Part of this work is the presentation of the production system in the interior of Sandbostel factory under the motto of PROCESS, PERFORMANCE, PRODUCT. The exhibition is focused on the outcome of the production process. The mattress will be presented in its entirety and shows the production process in its full dynamic. The sheets have not been made in this project. The frame of the mattress is made of genuine Teak wood. Each mattress has been hand-signed by the founders and signed by KÄGER, namely Elke Heidenreich, Björn Wagner and Oskar Engdahl. Public: You can find the standard mattresses in the official shop. The production will start in November 2015. The individual sheets will be sold separately in autumn. The exhibition will be on display in Sandbostel factory for the entire duration of the project in February/March 2016. The LEMONADE is by Karl Heinrich Haas, Joseph Damberg & Co. GmbH. Severe hyponatremia in a child due to limited water intake. Severe hyponatremia should be considered in children who are unable to increase their fluid intake, have seizures or lethargy, or exhibit other neurological abnormalities or clinical signs of neurological disease. A previously healthy, 1-yr-old girl with a hemolytic disease of the newborn developed severe hyponatremia that was treated by increased water intake. A dramatic increase in her serum sodium levels was observed after water intake was increased from 0.6 to 1.7 L/d. Unusual neurological and physical findings in children with hyponatremia should suggest the possibility of increasing fluid intake. Research scientists at the University of Texas have done an extensive review of the latest scientific literature and found an avalanche of evidence that the local food movement is not good for us. "This review of the literature, while certainly showing that the general public is much more aware of the link between fresh food and health, shows that the amount of knowledge people have about the local food movement is very limited and that the link between buying local and health and health and the environment is very weak,” said Irene Duarte, a post-doctoral fellow in the School of Human Environment, in the Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences and in the School of Public Health at the University of Texas. Duarte is the lead author of the review, which appears in the online edition of the journal Nature Sustainability. The review summarizes the recent scientific literature on the topic of “local food and health,” including studies from the last three years. In total, the scientists analyzed 287 studies that focused on local food in the United States. “This was a pretty comprehensive review of the literature, and the evidence base for supporting local food is surprisingly weak,” Duarte said. “The average American buys roughly 0.5 tons of food per month, which is roughly half the amount of food that was eaten by the US population between 1900 and 2000. The price of food is a reflection of how much food was produced to feed the population of the US. Therefore, it is not surprising that we are buying less food today because we are able to
