The invention relates to a hydraulic control arrangement for a hydraulically-actuable machine, such as an earth-moving machine having at least one hydraulic machine capable of being actuated by a hydraulic power supply, the arrangement having a control unit for controlling the actuation of the machine. For controlling the action of a hydraulic machine, such as a hydraulic motor or a hydraulic pump, hydraulic control arrangements are known in various forms. One form of a control arrangement as described in, for example, West German Auslegeschrift No. 25 35 340, comprises a so-called two-line control arrangement in which the hydraulic pumps can be connected to the hydraulic machine via two branches. The branches are connected to a pump line connecting to the pump and a return line connecting to the return line of the hydraulic machine, respectively. The control arrangement has a controllable flow regulator which, with an open position and a closed position, can be controlled in relation to a command variable, so that with a closed position of the flow regulator a flow can be caused to flow from the pump to the machine. With an open position of the flow regulator, that is to say with an absence of a flow, a return flow can be caused to flow back from the machine to the pump. This type of control arrangement is used in particular for driving construction or earth-moving machines which have a hydraulic drive and which have, for example, a forward drive or a gear drive for the drive. With these machines the drive is ensured by the combination of a hydraulic motor which in the motor running state is connected to the hydraulic power supply with the control arrangement and in which, with an open position of the flow regulator, a return flow can be ensured from the hydraulic motor to the hydraulic power supply, and an intermediate circuit which comprises, with the closed position of the flow regulator, a pump line and a return line connected to the hydraulic motor, so that the motor is driven indirectly, via the hydraulic power supply, and can be connected to the hydraulic power supply via the control arrangement, the pump line and the return line of the intermediate circuit. The control arrangement operates in a known manner. A supply line supplies the command variable, that is to say the pump system pressure, which acts on a control valve for controlling the flow regulator. The control valve responds to the command variable or system pressure by adjusting the position of the flow regulator. When the flow regulator is closed, the supply line leads to a pump line which connects to the pump. The pump transfers the

Q: Feature request: By click counts, all comments are shown A few times I have seen an askmetoo.com question with a number of answers with tens of upvotes, and yet the answer with the most votes doesn't have the first response. Then I had to scroll down to a more recent response and it could be that there are only a few responses, but I don't know what the clicking count is. So that no one who wants an answer feels they're missing out: show the total number of answers/upvotes. A: Where will this information be displayed? In the "similar questions" section of the questions you're viewing? That's a bad idea. If you know that one question has 10 answers, it's very likely you can find that question by searching, so a listing of similar questions is unlikely to be relevant to your current question. If you're going to display it, then I think you should only display it for questions with a high number of answers. When you're here to ask a question, you're more likely to be checking the answers to see what people have to say. I'd be fine with displaying the number of answers for very popular questions, but don't display the number of answers for 1 - 30 questions. Q: How to set a fill for an area between a stroke and a fill? I need to use a fill on a SVG area between a stroke and the outer area, something like this: This is obviously not working because the area shape is not inside of the area element. Is there any way of achieving this without having two elements? A: Yes, you can...
