* _Photoshop Elements_ : This is a newer offering by Adobe that includes many of the features of Photoshop as well as tools for beginners. * _GIMP_ : Originally from the GNU Project, an open source project, GIMP has become the standard alternative to Photoshop for Linux. GIMP is free to use and comes with a feature-rich and efficient photo editing tool. There is a learning curve and more powerful Photoshop users have developed plugins that can be downloaded from the internet that make GIMP even more powerful. GIMP is also available on Macintosh. * _Painter_ : The Macintosh counterpart to GIMP, Painter is very powerful and has a learning curve similar to that of GIMP. Although Photoshop is the industry standard, many professionals still prefer Painter for its power and ease of use. GIMP offers more features but is a little slower. You can learn more about Painter and GIMP at `www.gimp.org` and at `www.painter.org`. If you have a Windows PC, a free program called Paint.NET (`www.paint.net`) is available that has many of the features of Photoshop. In fact, this free paint program was developed for the Windows platform by the same group that created Photoshop. If you'd like to create raster (bitmapped) images, or raster images of any kind, you may want to use Adobe Photoshop. However, a great alternative is the open source, cross-platform program called GIMP (see Figure 16-19). Figure 16-19. GIMP is a powerful image editing tool that comes with many useful plug-ins. ## Adobe Illustrator Adobe Illustrator (see Figure 16-20) is another very popular design program. Often referred to as a vector-image-creation program (it can render both bitmapped and vector-based images), Illustrator can be used to create complex designs for a variety of print and web formats. It can be used to create logos, labels, posters, title cards, and more. The library of graphic elements that comes with Illustrator is extensive, and you can download a variety of clip art, gradients, and other elements from the Internet. You can also use the font library. (See Chapter 5 for more about fonts.) Illustrator isn't a photo-ed

Capital Expenditures Up in 2007 Despite a downturn in the economy, capital expenditures by financial and non-financial firms are projected to increase significantly in 2007 with a focus on infrastructure and equipment to support industry. THE KEY FINDINGS IN CAPITAL EXPENDITURES Full-year 2007 capital expenditures, excluding acquisitions and divestitures, are projected to be up 20.8%, largely on the back of faster-than-expected public spending and with an anticipated increase in full-year freight rates. The Bureau expects capital expenditures to remain elevated due to historically high levels of backlogs and a decline in inventories, and a weak labour market. Federal government (including the Canadian Armed Forces), private and public sector capital spending (excluding acquisitions, divestitures and federal government) are both projected to rise this year in relation to employment, which is about 4% higher than in 2006, but capital spending is projected to rise by about 9%, compared to approximately 4% in 2006. Although investment banking and trading is forecast to decline as a percentage of total capital expenditures to less than 15% in 2007, it is anticipated that the investment banking business will increase in value. There will be a substantial growth in real assets. In addition, expenditure on information systems is likely to rise significantly over 2007 due to the growing interest in IT by the Canadian public. CAPITAL EXPENDITURES BY REGION Capacity by region is predicted to increase for all jurisdictions, even if Canadian economic growth is slower than in 2006. CAPITAL EXPENDITURES BY SECTOR Sectors are projected to experience a high growth in capital expenditures compared to 2006 with the following sectors projected to be above average in their capital spending growth. Capital Expenditures by Industry, 2007 The breakdown of capital expenditures for each industry is forecast to remain relatively stable in 2007. INVESTMENT IN THE AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY The automotive industry represented by the four largest auto manufacturers has seen capital spending drop from more than $80 billion in 2006 to less than $70 billion in 2007. Investment in the automotive sector is projected to drop by about 20% compared to 2006. As a result, the automotive industry is predicted to be one of the few sectors to post a decline in capital expenditures of more than 15% over 2006. However, the automotive industry is expected to grow considerably in value. In fact, the value of investments in the automotive sector is

Q: How to find the position of sum of the elements in an array? I am trying to find the maximum element in an array that can sum to a particular value. For example, if A=[1,2,3,4,6], then the position of the maximum sum that equals 12 can be at index 4. Here is the code: def maximum(A): n = len(A) x=0 M = 12 while(x >> A = [1,2,3,4,6] >>> highest_index = 0 >>> max_sum = 12 This is almost the right thing. You only need to scale the highest_index by the length of the list. You can do this by multiplying it by len(A): >>> last_index = highest_index * len(A) >>> highest_index = highest_index + 1 Now we set your sum to the second highest_index: >>> max_sum = max(A, key=lambda i: (max_sum - A
