Imaging the cornea in rheumatoid arthritis. Rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is associated with a number of extra-articular manifestations, and in many cases, due to its chronic and progressive nature, it manifests with corneal involvement. Corneal manifestations may manifest as superficial punctate keratitis, superficial keratoconjunctivitis sicca, corneal edema, ulceration, and neovascularization. In many patients, these conditions may appear before joint symptoms begin and corneal manifestations are the first clinical clue to the diagnosis of RA. This article reviews the pathophysiology of inflammation in RA, with particular attention to the potential pathways by which RA-associated serologic findings may lead to direct endothelial cell damage. The various imaging techniques for detecting inflammatory changes in the cornea and the different clinical manifestations of corneal involvement are also reviewed.

The invention relates generally to hose and pipe couplings and more particularly to the provision of a hose coupling that makes it possible to connect a hose or tube to a pipe, to connect the pipe to a machine or the like, and finally to drain off the liquid or the like that has been transported in the hose or tube from the pipe. The coupling is for that purpose equipped with a gripping element for the gripping engagement with the end of the pipe and a ventilation hose that can be connected to the filler opening in the pipe. These couplings are well-known in the art and are illustrated, for example, in DE 35 37 665 C2. It is to be understood that the ventilation hose does not have to be permanently connected to the pipe. As a rule, a hose or tube has a rigid section of a

SEOUL (Reuters) - North Korean leader Kim Jong Un celebrated his birthday on Monday with one of his youngest sister, who has been seen at a number of public events to the very end, meaning her fast waning life looks set to be equally public. Photos published by the state-run KCNA news agency show the newborn Kim, one of four siblings born to Kim Jong Un's late father and mother, all under the age of 21 at the time. But analysts said the picture of a smiling Kim Jong Un with two children under 10 years old provided a glimpse into the future of the family leadership in North Korea, with the eldest son Kim Jong Nam born in 1981, and youngest Kim Yo Jong, 3, born in 1992. "The firstborn, Kim Jong Nam, was killed by opposition elements (in Kuala Lumpur) in Malaysia, but the youngest, Kim Yo Jong, keeps smiling on," said analyst David Kang, a senior fellow for Korea studies at the Washington-based Center for Strategic and International Studies. Kim Yo Jong is on a list of potential successors to be groomed for leadership at a Politburo meeting in March, Kang said, although it was unclear if she would be among the chosen 20 at the meeting. In pictures published by the North Korean state-run news agency on the same day as Kim Jong Un's birthday, she was seen as a little girl, dressed in a white coat and polka dot skirt, sitting in the lap of her brother, in what one media outlet described as "a warm embrace". (GRAPHIC: What did North Korea do on Kim Jong Un's birthday? - tmsnr.rs/1DtGJ2q) Kim Yo Jong and Kim Jong Un don't look very alike, which Kang said could be because the new leader of North Korea received most of his genes from his father, with some from his mother. The pair are not especially close, with one North Korean official quoted by the Daily NK in February saying Kim Jong Un saw his
