The popular social networking website is updating its web browser to offer better support for tracking updates and RSS feeds. The search giant has pushed out the latest version of the Browser to its user base, and users are now able to initiate manual updates. The new feature is only visible to users on Windows 8.1, and only visible on a computer that is running the latest version of the Windows OS. Along with the feature, the web browser application allows users to check out videos as well, using a new option. The update is a part of Microsoft's updates being rolled out to offer an improved experience to users. The updates did not affect any of the features as users are able to access the site normally with this update. Users on the site were able to sign up for the RSS Feed support, however, they were initially not able to access it. According to the official message that is making users aware of the changes on the Microsoft Developer Network, the site has been updated to offer one-click updates to users. "We have added the ability to update your IE for Windows 8.1 to browse the web without relying on automatic updates. You may opt out of
