The Hollow is a story-driven, turn-based role playing game where your choices decide how the story plays out. In Grimm's Hollow, your main goal is to help Lavender escape from the dreamlike world of the Hollow and make it back to her own time. But to do that, you will need to collect and use the items available in each level. The Hollow contains multiple worlds and hundreds of items to find. Each of them is different and you can use them in different ways to your advantage. You don't only need to collect items to survive but you also need to collect hearts to unlock new content, like new spells or upgrades for your equipment. Soundtrack: In all of my games, I always try to find a soundtrack that fits the game perfectly. In my opinion, James Phinney-Williams did a great job with this game. All of the tracks fit the atmosphere and emotion of the game well. The goal of the game is to score goals against your opponent(s). Each team has multiple 'Spacemarks', which are placed in the game-space. When the match starts, both teams are given a number of "Spaceballs" which they can play with in the game-space. You can use them for many things, including moving across the game-space, throwing objects at the opponent or hitting them with the ball. Once a ball is in-play, it cannot be recalled. You have to move it across the game-space. Your use of a ball will determine how well your team scores. In order to score, you need to use as many Spaceballs as possible. You need to keep track of the number of balls which are in-play. If you have too few, your opponent will score and vice versa. This game is a cross between some classic sports games: such as Tecmo Super Baseball and Mario & Sonic at the Olympic Winter Games. You will have to think of creative ways to use the limited resources to win. FAQ: - How is this game different from other games of this type? - Why do I need to pay to play Spaceball? - If I buy the game, can I play it offline? - Does this game support Linux? - What are the characters? - Where can I download the game? ### What's new:

+ has been out for 9 months. You no longer need to hold your GPS in to be able to get a drift course. You can now drift in fourth and steer around corners right in the map view. It cost 4.99 (might be sold at a cheaper price now that it is out), but is worth every penny. It also runs in the background and does not slow the app down. So even as you are flying, you can still do other things in the app or watch the map without stopping the app.I also do not believe that it is hard to understand and I was able to fly in my first minute of practice. Well I know drift landings are easier said than done. The WinFly and EZ Pilot apps have helped quite a bit, but I have to admit that I don't know I could land and set the aircraft in a turn using the map. I would imagine that the harder the turn the more beat up I would be if I decided to try. In the area that I fly, it would be hard to be in the same condition every time. I have flown in closer in and out of practice areas, but it takes time to get a feel for when to take a turn. The best time that I could land, if any, was at 5.00 for two factors. First, I was running the app at minimum settings with only the height gauge. This gave me a very accurate feel of height by range and if I was close, then so was the rest of the world. Second, there was no wind to blow the grass. h-Do you know any tricks or does anyone got tips to plot the turns nicely?Any specifics in the right / left turn? I've spent about a year flying with the new moon and I can't get to a similar glide speed even with the new VNAV and tougher GPS (I use the flysky GPS from the website). With the new moon, I can "see" the ground very well and am a bit lazy when I have to steer. This limits my choice of distance to fly (1-2km in international flights).With the new moon I can reach levels between 60-75FT per second. With the new moon I usually put 1500m between me and the nearest tree and much more if the terrain is extreme (rocks, steep hills, boulders).With the new moon I fly with a NC between 0-15 and I never do trigonometry when I drift
