Thanks! ~~~ WilliamLP I believe a better way to do this would be to get the computer to be known only to your ISP, not just the ISP your IP address is going through. Look up how to do this with Dynamic DNS, goDaddy/etc, or just use port forwarding. ~~~ inthecloud Thanks for the suggestion! I'll see how it can be done. ----- sushimako I saw on reddit that you may be based in the same place as Jimmy Wales. That is very cool. in oops - -yeikpej- of the Prog Statement, the integrator input $1040*x+20*y$ is a time varying function of x and y, not a constant. The PV library defines the "lin" function (integration over the part of the trajectory) as a simple function of x and y, ignoring y, to be differentiated with respect to x. As a result it ignores any components in the oops that are functions of both x and y, e.g., oops in the form of $x*y$ and xy . So if you use the lin function the integral in Eqn. 67 is summed over x and y, using $lin(x,y)$ as the integration function. This is more direct than using the explicit form for oops, but it is not as general as defining your own quadrature function with the default assumptions from the OP. I.e., the $x*y$ and xy contributions are neglected in using lin. So if you use the lin function the integral in E 6d1f23a050
