Life Saver is a FREE bootable Ubuntu LiveCD image that is based on 9.10.0: SWIFT: How to get the path to a file and create an NSData object out of it? I have some java code that reads an XML file from the server and stores it in a String. It does this by using an InputStream. I'm trying to get the path to the file inside of the Text file and open the string representation of the InputStream. I can get the path, and have it open the string representation of the InputStream. The problem is I need to create an NSData object out of it so I can share it with an UIImage or just store it inside the document directory. How do I do this? I have the following code: let inputStream = NSInputStream(fileAtPath: "") let data = inputStream.data; Thanks for your help. A: Have you tried using NSData(contentsOf

You might have noticed that there’s no catchphrase on the side of the bus carrying our nominee for president this year, but the slogan is on the front of a comprehensive, albeit unlikely, package of proposals Republicans have put forth to prevent Iran from obtaining a bomb. “Kill the deal,” reads the bumper sticker, as if war is something the United States is just itching for. The slogan is repeated on the side of the bus and in the ads and yard signs produced for Romney’s campaign, along with the concrete plans to block Iran’s progress toward a bomb that Romney lists on his Web site. This is the real horror of the doomsday scenario Republicans have been warning about for so long: The party with a substantial and devoted base of voters and donors who revel in military threats is now actually taking the country to war. This is madness on all fronts: nuts, excessive, unrealistic, unready and not very smart. And Republicans seem to have no clue how to admit defeat on a policy fight they’ve drawn us into. We’re quite literally out of options here, and the Republican Party wants the world to think there’s still a light at the end of the tunnel. About 10 years ago, Iran’s nuclear program was genuinely a matter of grave concern. Sure, most of the world had concerns about Iran’s record of supporting terrorist groups and harsh government policies, but the threat of a nuclear Iran was real. That threat has faded thanks to smart diplomacy and the creation of non-military tools that were designed to thwart Iran’s efforts. If we don’t like how the negotiations are going, we can insist 6d1f23a050
