Jul 11, 2006 - It is a material that does not dry out.For example, glass wool is a damp-proof material because moisture from the heating room penetrates the walls and cools the exterior walls, forming water droplets that can cause the house to rot. Insulated houses made of CIP-panels are built with special insulation. And Styrofoam has no thermal insulation qualities at all. Thermal insulation characteristics of foam plastic. The thermal insulation properties of expanded polystyrene boards and foams depend on the number of micropores in the material and their size. The more pores and their size, the better insulating properties of foam. For foam plastic, this ratio should be 5:2 (for 5 micropores in a gram of material and two pores per centimeter of length). In construction, foam plastic is usually used with a density of 25 kg/m3. This means that 1 m3 of foam contains about 0.25, or 25 kilograms of foam. In fact, the content of foam in one cubic meter of material can be much less. It all depends on where the material is used. The wider the size of the foam, the better insulating properties, although it is more expensive. In general, this material has excellent thermal insulation performance, but it has a number of disadvantages. It is not suitable for insulating floors on the first floors. This is due to the high weight of the material and weak mechanical strength. Styrofoam refers to lightweight materials, but it requires mandatory protection from moisture. Otherwise, the insulation loses its insulating properties. Therefore, it is necessary to lay it in two layers or mount an additional waterproofing film on top of the foam. In addition, condensate is formed on the insulation, so it should be protected by a vapor barrier. If there is no such possibility, you should treat the surface of the plasterboard with antifungal compounds. If you plan to install drywall construction in the bathroom, it is better to give preference to moisture-resistant materials. Moisture-resistant drywall is labeled GKLV. It can also be used for finishing the ceiling and walls in the bathroom. The GKLV sheets are mm thick. Gypsum plasterboard, depending on the method of installation, is divided into the following types:. Mounting boards to the wall and ceiling. Mounting gypsum boards on metal KNAUF profiles. Mounting drywall sheets on gypsum plasterboard profiles. Mounting profiles to the floor and ceiling. Profile types and their differences. Fastening of the sheets to the frame. Joints GKL in the corners. Fastening sheets to the framework with screws. Mounting sheets with KNAUF-superfloor. Mounting a one-layer partition wall. Assembling a two-layer partition wall. Mounting a multi-level partition wall. Installation of a multilevel partition with a door opening. Installation of a multi-tiered office partition. Installation of a multi-tier partition for a store. Installation of a multi-tier partition for a cottage. Partitioning multilevel partition assembly for an apartment. Installation of a multi-level partition with a door opening. Installation of a multi-tier partition for an office. Installation of a multi-level partition with a door opening.
